Addition to Exhibit “A”
AUSF Issues List

The following AUSF questions are in addition to those issued by Staff on September 4, 2007, and refer to the Report and Recommendations of the Arizona Eligible Telecommunications Carriers (“ETCs”) on Lifeline and Link-Up Issues (“ETC’s Report”)¹ which was filed on December 21, 2005 in Docket No. T-00000A-05-0380².

21. Should a program to improve participation in Lifeline and Link-Up be supported by AUSF?
22. Should the enrollment program recommended by the ETCs be implemented or is there another more cost effective method for increasing Lifeline and Link-Up participation?
23. Is the funding mechanism for the enrollment program recommended by the ETCs appropriate, should the cost be borne by the ETCs as a cost of doing business and being an ETC or is the some other method of funding that would be better?
24. Are the projections for potential Lifeline and Link-Up customers reasonable or is there other data that would increase or decrease the cost/benefit estimates contained in the ETC’s Report? Please provide such data.
25. Should the recommendations in the ETC’s Report be implemented, how should the AUSF rules be modified to address the enrollment program and the payments that would be made to the Department of Economic Security (“DES”) for its participation?
26. Should there be a “cap” on the payments that could be made to DES for its participation in the enrollment program and, if so, how might such a cap be determined?
27. Should there be some form of a “sunset clause” that would end the enrollment program and, if so, what would be appropriate criteria for ending the program?
28. To what extent do other states promote enrollment in Lifeline and Link-Up as recommended in the ETC’s Report and to what extent have such state efforts been effective, both from an enrollment and cost perspective?
29. To what extent have communication services from non-ETCs, such as prepaid wireless offerings as one example, become the service of choice for eligible Lifeline customers who otherwise may have subscribed to an ETC’s Lifeline service?

The preceding list of questions is not exhaustive and other issues are likely to arise as this matter proceeds. In addition, parties should feel free to comment on any additional issues which they believe are relevant.
